

GATEWAYS for GROWTH

NKY Welcoming Plan

Letter from Lee Crume, Brent Cooper, Leisa Mulcahy:

There is a lot to love about Northern Kentucky - the view, the vibrancy, and the strong sense of community. From urban living to bluegrass farmland, this place is special, and the people of Northern Kentucky are the most important ingredient to its unique charm.

Our region is experiencing a time of great prosperity, while concurrently our employers are experiencing hardships in their demand for workforce. In response, the Northern Kentucky Chamber of Commerce and the partners of the Growing Regional Outcomes through Workforce (GROW) NKY collective impact strategy are using the community's full complement of assets to grow, attract, and retain a globally competitive workforce.

Supporting this mission through a continued heritage of hospitality, we must understand how our community is evolving and how we can best meet the needs of those who live, work and play here. As part of GROW NKY's broader focus of attracting and retaining the best and brightest talent to our region, the need for new talent is evident and being addressed through a variety of strategies ranging from young professional engagement to regional marketing. In the spirit of creating a welcoming community, we must promote and harness the capacity of all members of our community if we want to stay economically competitive and socially and politically relevant in the world today.

This plan reflects the work of the Gateways for Growth Taskforce that includes more than 50 key stakeholders across multiple sectors including industry, community organizations, education, and public service. With a year of planning, discovery, and hard work, the group has developed a comprehensive, yet realistic community plan for immigrant integration. It provides a clear outline of priorities and direction for how we can help all members of our community thrive. Their vision speaks volumes to the importance and momentum of this work today.

This plan will require all of us to come together as a community to bring these goals to fruition. We all have a role to play and our collective future depends on its success. Please join us in committing to make Northern Kentucky the most welcoming community in the country.

Letter from Grant Makers: New American Economy and Welcoming America

The Gateways for Growth Challenge was created in 2016 to provide communities with demonstrated leadership and commitment to developing an inclusive, accessible, and welcoming environment to all residents the opportunity to receive support for that endeavor. Now in its third round, New American Economy and Welcoming America have awarded more than 50 communities nationwide with tailored economic research on the contributions of immigrants; technical assistance in the development of a multisector strategic plan; and matching grants to bolster this work. Awardees have ranged from Anchorage, Alaska to Portland, Maine and include communities as small as Grand Forks, North Dakota and as large as Dallas, Texas. Each community receives this award because they have shown a deep commitment from local government, business and civil society to work collaboratively toward concrete, action-oriented recommendations to ensure that city is addressing both the challenges and opportunities facing the immigrant community and is creating pathways for all residents to succeed. Northern Kentucky is one of a select few communities to receive all three components of this competitive grant opportunity.

Northern Kentucky was one of only 14 communities selected nationally for the 2019 Gateways for Growth award to receive research from NAE and technical assistance from NAE and Welcoming America to support this work. The NKY Chamber Foundation also received a matching grant of $12,500 from Duke Energy. Grant partners included Catholic Charities of Louisville - Kentucky Office for Refugees, Duke Energy, Gateway Community and Technical College, and the Northern Kentucky Workforce Investment Board.

Northern Kentucky's grant application stood out to our selection team due to the commitment to create a multi-sector plan focused on economics while recognizing the importance of communities feeling a sense of belonging in the region. The NKY Chamber and Gateway Community and Technical College, through the Growing Regional Outcomes through Workforce (GROW) NKY collective, identified well respected partners from many sectors who would contribute in meaningful ways.

Fatou Souare
Operations Manager

Fatou Souare grew up in Senegal, West Africa, and never so much as thought of America. But then she fell in love, with an American. “My dream was to stay in Senegal and try to help the people there. That’s the heart that God gave me,” she says. “Then I went to my cousin’s wedding in the city.”

There she met a teacher from Louisiana. A year later, in 1998, they married, and she moved to the United States. Things went well, except he insisted she stay home. So when their fourth child entered preschool and she wanted to attend college, he objected. She moved out.

That, she explains, is how she ended up in Hebron, Kentucky, temporarily at a friend’s home. “I didn’t have a car, but I found a school right next to me—American National University.” Souare finished her associate’s and bachelor’s degrees in business administration and accounting, and landed a front desk job at the Comfort Inn in Florence. At the same time, she raised her children and reached out to assist other new arrivals from Africa.

“I would go to the African store and say, ‘If you know someone who is having trouble—an application for a job, for housing, or doesn’t know their way—I don’t know everything, but a lot of stuff I’ve already figured out how to do.’”

By 2016, only four years after moving to Kentucky, Souare landed her dream job. As an operations manager at Staffmark, she helps businesses and workers alike, and is particularly adept at guiding new arrivals, directing them to English classes and outlining how they must painstakingly work their way back up the career ladder. She also co-founded the Kentucky African Women’s Association, a nonprofit that helps people in need.

“You can see, people who had a big job in Africa, they’ll say, ‘I was a lawyer.’ I say, ‘It doesn’t count here. You’re starting all over.’ I know it’s hard for them, but they have to understand that it was their decision [to seek safety in the United States]. It was their life, or their job,” she says.

Johannes "Hans" Frederik Philippo
Owner

It was 1977, and Johannes "Hans" Frederik Philippo was working on his civil engineering degree in Holland when his girlfriend's father asked him the question: "We are moving to the United States. Are you coming also?" His future father-in-law, a tulip-bulb exporter, wanted to get into the horse business. Kentucky was his destination.

"And in 1978 we moved," says Philippo. "August 24th, my birthday. I was 23 years old, I had no clue. I had $1,500 in my pocket."

Philippo stayed, married the girl, and in 1986 launched his own business. Holland Roofing now has 30 offices across the Midwest and upwards of 450 employees, most of whom were born in the United States. He had learned about roofing after his father-in-law sold the tulip business in 1980 to breed horses, and a man seeking workers asked if he could read blueprints. "I can draw them for you," Philippo answered.

Philippo was born and raised in Lisse, Holland, the tulip capital of the world. He sold tulips briefly in the United States for his father-in-law, "on the road," he says, "talking only to Americans," thus mightily improving his English. And you might say that later he planted many more bulbs of his own.

In addition to Holland Roofing, Philippo leases real estate; owns Lisse Steakhouse restaurant and House of Orange sports bar; has an insurance company, antique shops, a banquet hall, and more; raises Angus cows for beef on his South Kentucky farm; and owns an amateur soccer team, the Dutch Lions.

The Lions sponsor events to promote soccer, and his businesses donate to causes throughout the region. In 2017, the Kingdom of the Netherlands appointed him an Honorary Consul in Cincinnati. His claim to fame, he says, is that both his adult children live in his zip code. He loves the Midwest.

"The American people accept people so easily and give them a big chance," he says. "And they're fine with people succeeding, and it's awesome. So all I want to say is thank you."

Acknowledgements

The dedicated partners of the Northern Kentucky's Gateways for Growth Planning Team and Taskforce provided perspective, guidance, and insight throughout the plan development. We deeply appreciate the organizations and individuals for their participation in the process and contributions to the plan. We are also grateful for the numerous community members who shared their stories and ideas.

We especially thank the teams at New American Economy and Welcoming America. Their expertise, encouragement, and support have sparked a movement in our community. Many thanks to Duke Energy for valuing the importance of building a more welcoming community as well as the generous support of workforce development in our region.
